Helen
Hi Sally! I'm going to a rock concert with Jenny this evening? Why don't you come along? 😊

Tina
That really sounds amazing! You know I never miss such kind of activities, but I can't make it this time.

Helen
Oh, really? Why not?

Tina
My mum is going to come home late today, so I have to cook the meals and look after my brother. I have lots of responsibilities at home as mum usually works until late hours. 😞

Helen
I'm really sorry to hear that you can't join us! Don't worry! Another time, maybe.

It's important that parents start giving small chores to their children at an early age. This way, they see themselves a part of the family and they become more responsible and self-confident adults when they grow up. It also helps them to be more successful and disciplined at school. Chores teach teenagers real life skills and prepare them for the real world.

Why does Mr. Taylor think that children should do some chores at home?

- A) Children should do more housework than their parents.
- B) Children need to learn real life skills at school to be responsible adults.
- C) Doing household chores makes children less self-confident.
- D) Doing simple chores teach children responsibility.

4. Look at the table. Which one is TRUE?

Classroom Rules During a lesson

6. What chore is the father responsible for doing?

Jane lives with her family. She is a student. She has to help her parents with the chores at home because they work and come home late. She is responsible for doing the laundry and taking out the garbage. She has to set the table when her father cooks meals for dinner.

7. Mum : John, can you tidy up your room, please? You've left all your toys and clothes on the floor.

John : OK, Mum, but later. I'm busy at the moment.

Mum : Come on, John. What are you doing?

John : I'm playing computer games now.

Mum : John! You must tidy up your room now!

John : Please, Mum! Can I do it later?

Mum : OK, but please don't forget to do it before you go to bed!

John : OK, Mum!

D) John's room isn't neat and tidy now.

8. Read the speech bubbles below. Who doesn't mind doing the household chores?

I think doing housework is a waste of time. I have to tidy up my room on Sundays, but I really hate it.

I have to take the garbage out, but it really gets on my nerves.

Dusting the furniture is my responsibility but I never do it. Mum does it for me.

In our house, I'm responsible for setting the table and doing the washing up. I don't think doing housework is a problem.

- A) Sally      B) Jason
C) Helen      D) Mike

Dear Holly

This is my first year at university in London. I live in a large and comfortable house close to the university. I have a flatmate called Jenny. We get on well with each other as we share the same interests and we can trust each other all the time, but the problem is that she thinks doing chores is a waste of time and she would rather do more enjoyable activities, instead. Doing the laundry, mopping the floor, doing the shopping and cooking are all my responsibilities, so I don't have enough time to do my school works. Jenny just has to do the washing up and vacuum the carpets, but she says they get on her nerves and she never does these chores, either. When I ask her to do them, she always finds an excuse and refuses. Sometimes my school friends come over for a drink and I feel embarrassed when they see our flat in a mess.

Please help me

Sally
